

What Would You Do If You Were Told Today ...

“You Have Only 18 Months To Live”

Meet 10 ordinary people who refused to give in to the evil powers of cancer. Their amazing stories will inspire you and empower you ... even if you’ve never given much thought to cancer before today.

“A really powerful and very important book with life lessons for everyone. Five stars!”

Larry King

“What a marvelous inspirational book you have put together. It is so touching as one reads each story.”

Mrs. Betty Ford
Former First Lady

Dear lover of life,

What I have to say in this letter will shock you because it is the honest truth. Honesty is in short supply today. We don’t always see it in our elected officials. We don’t always see it in our newspapers. And we don’t always see it in our healthcare providers.

The truth is you are at risk of getting cancer. If you are young, the risk is small. But you can still get it. By the time you graduate college, your chance of being afflicted is 1 in 19,608. Not bad.

By the time you settle down and raise a family, your chances are 1 in 622. And by the time you retire, your chances are 1 in 14. No matter how fast you walk or run though life, cancer will always be gaining on you.

Here is another truth. Your chances of surviving cancer are better than they’ve ever been. But ... and this is a BIG BUT ... you must take control of your own destiny.

If you're old enough to remember 1960s television, you may remember a lawyer by the name of Paul Bryan. He was the fictional character played by Ben Gazzara on TV's "Run For Your Life." In the show, Paul was shocked to discover, after a routine physical, that he had a year, maybe two to live.

And so for the next 85 episodes we saw Paul Bryan living life to the max ... not wanting to waste even a minute of precious time. The old adage "life is short" takes on a whole new meaning when disease steals your future and your dreams.

But Paul Bryan and "Run For Your Life" were fiction – part of a writer's imagination. Now what would happen if you were told today that you have cancer? That you may not live to see your next birthday ... or attend your child's graduation ... or live long enough to fall in love.

Would you run for your life or would you run for cover? Or ... would you stand and fight. The answers of 10 people overwhelmed by sudden bad news may surprise you.

I'd like to introduce you to 9 of my friends – Tim, Lillie, Lou, Fern, Matthew, Ricky, Doug, Paula and Hank. Together with me, Michael Hayes Samuelson, we'd like to tell you what it's like to put your dreams on hold ... to come so close to death you can almost say you've been there.

More importantly, we'd like to tell you what it's like to defeat death ... to grab that cancer demon by the neck and force it into submission for good. And if you think our stories are only for people who have cancer or people who know someone who has cancer ... think again.

"Cancer patients, cancer caregivers and even those free of cancer will gain strength and inspiration from your wonderful book. You are a great role-model for all of us."

What makes Voices from the Edge – Life Lessons from the Cancer Community so powerful?

The 10 people whose stories you will read are experts at cancer treatment. Not one of them has a medical degree mind you, which is a good thing. They don't speak the language of the medical profession, which no doubt is as foreign to you as it is to me.

Their expertise comes from experience. They've been through the hell of cancer and they are eager to tell you how they made it and what they learned from the experience.

Listen ...

- Tim was told he had only 18 months to live. How did he handle the news that would destroy just about anyone? Tim's reaction will both astonish and empower you.
- See how Tim rebuffed the experts who wanted to carve up his body in the name of science and how his decision may have saved his life.
- Stand at Lillie's side as she practices in the mirror how to tell her husband she has breast cancer. It's the kind of news no one wants to share.
- Discover why Lillie decided not to have her breasts reconstructed after they were surgically removed. She works at the Johns Hopkins Breast Center. Does she know something you don't?
- Laugh with Lillie when one of her silicone nipples pops off and lands on her dessert dish.
- Is there a difference between pain and suffering? Cancer survivors believe there is. Discover which one you must embrace and which one you must let go and why.
- The one place you never want to be caught wearing an inflatable bra. Read all about Lena's explosive adventure.

These are real people, just like you and me. They are teachers, college students and corporate presidents, entrepreneurs and homemakers, nurses and engineers.

One is in his early twenties, another in his early sixties. Most are middle-aged, men and women from Michigan and Illinois, Rhode Island and New York, Maryland, Washington and California too.

They were all crushed by the weight of these three words: "you have cancer." And every one of them has a message for you ... a message of hope and informed choices, encouragement and empowerment.

Here's more ...

- Why that still small voice inside you often gives you the best medical advice.

- Why mammograms are not 100 percent accurate and why you need to do breast self exams regularly.
- How to work around a sometimes archaic and ineffective healthcare system.
- How getting cancer might actually help you focus more clearly on what's really important to you.
- See how college student Matthew battled his cancer and helped his three closest college buddies battle their cancer.
- Discover why children see cancer very differently from adults.
- Experience the spiritual world children experience that most adults don't and why this happens.

And more ...

- Hear what children say about their own illnesses and what's important to them. (Sure to make you cry.)
- Discover why healthcare professionals are at the greatest risk from getting cancer. No it's not from the disease itself. This is an alarming look at human nature.
- Out of the blue, 19-year-old college student Doug Ulman is told he has cancer. See how he reacts to this sucker punch ... the first of three he'll receive in his life.
- See how chance, circumstance and divine intervention played a part in one person's discovery of and cure from cancer. This story should be made into a movie.
- Eyeball Doug as he uses visualization techniques to bounce back from his cancer. He returns to his game of soccer only 70 days after surgery. An awesome story.
- Witness Paula bear her heart and soul. Read her heartwarming thank you letter to her doctor and her inspirational thank you letter to God.
- Why so many people say "getting cancer is the best thing that ever happened to me." Stunning revelations you must know about.
- Discover how great leadership skills are built on the need to survive just one more day. Essential reading for every manager, executive and CEO.

"Through life's journey you have successfully captured stories of extraordinary individuals who have found peace and happiness to succeed. I applaud your dedication."

Secretary, U.S. Office of Homeland Security

"This is a compelling book. Read it and share it with others!"

Ken H. Blanchard
Coauthor of The One Minute Manager and Gung Ho!

What is your cancer? Maybe it's breast cancer or colon cancer. Maybe skin cancer or lung cancer. Or is yours an I-hate-my-job cancer, I-can't-pay-my-bills cancer or an I'm-lost-and-lonely cancer? Every one of them eats away at your insides and every one of them is deadly if left untreated.

Voices from the Edge – Life Lessons from the Cancer Community is a book by cancer patients for everyone because everyone has some kind of cancer to deal with. Ten cancer survivors want you to experience the energy of self-empowerment. You can defeat any affliction, sickness, calamity, or rotten break you may face. How to do it starts on page one.

How Do I Get My Hands On Voices from the Edge – Life Lessons from the Cancer Community?

This beautiful hard bound book with dust jacket sells for $22 and you can get it right here. But keep reading. We have a very special offer for you today.

Voices from the Edge – Life Lessons from the Cancer Community author Michael Hayes Samuelson has another book for you.

Now this book in NOT for everyone.

If you have never felt overwhelming pain, physical or emotional, this book is not for you. If you have never been afraid, or disillusioned or confused to the point you didn't know who to believe or trust, this book is not for you.

If you have not personally felt the cold chill of death or had someone dear to you taken away, this book is not for you. If you have not lost love or fortune, this book is not for you.

If however, you know pain and loss and frustration and fear, then you will take pleasure and comfort in Michael Hayes Samuelson's second book

Moments ... Not Years.

- It's an enlightening journey through the life of a baby boomer.
- It's watching Saturday morning cartoons on a black and white television set in Ann Arbor Michigan.
- It's coming of age ... hijinks, tomfoolery and girls. Oh those girls.
- It's a battle for survival in the jungles of Vietnam.
- It's falling in love and raising a family.
- It's responsibility and standing for what is right.
- It's "you have cancer."
- It's a battle for survival in the suburbs of Michigan.
- It's so many questions ... so few answers.

If this book were made into a PBS special, Ken Burns would produce it and John Chancellor or David McCullough would narrate it. The narratives are so real, you become an eyewitness to each and every event.

And then there are the poems. They'll stop you dead in your tracks. You don't have to be a poetry lover to appreciate or even understand them.

- They are the journal entries of a survivor.
- They speak honestly of convalescence and recovery ... taking life in stride – dealing with the bumps and the detours – yet not missing a moment of enjoyment.
- They are a support group that constantly whispers back encouragement ...

"Yes you can!"

Moments ... Not Years is published in paperback and sells for $14.95. We're combining it with Voices from the Edge – Life Lessons from the Cancer Community to create a very special package. But there's still more.

Here it is ...

Bad news can ruin an otherwise good day. It will keep you tense – unable to relax. Some bad news is worse than other bad news. Some bad news sticks with you for a long, long time.

Can you imagine not being able to relax for days or weeks or even months? It's pretty scary, isn't it?

Sure there's all kinds of pills that will help you relax – take the edge off. But I want to offer you an alternative. A healthy alternative – easy to “swallow” with no side effects.

So I'm including in this package two digitally mastered relaxation audio tapes or CDs. They're enclosed in a handsome plastic binder, compact enough to take anywhere.

Each recording contains a deep relaxation exercise – four in all. Now I've got to be honest with you here. I don't understand everything there is to know about how the human mind or body works. But in the past 25 years, over 2 million people have used these exercises, and not one has ever written back to me saying they didn't work.

If you'll faithfully listen to these tapes each day and perform the simple breathing and visualization exercises on them, I promise you relief from stress induced insomnia, muscle tension and anxiety.

These cassette tapes sell every day for $19.95. The CD for $24.95.

Now let's recap what we have here and then I'll tell you about a special promotional offer – one that won't last forever.

You get ...

Voices from the Edge – Life Lessons from the Cancer Community

A hardcover book selling for $22.00, but truly priceless.

Moments ... Not Years

A soft cover book selling for $14.95 and even more priceless.

Relaxation – Four Guided Journeys to Peace and Serenity

Two audio cassettes selling for $19.95

or

One audio CD selling for $24.95, both, you guessed it, priceless.

If you were to combine the two books with the audio cassettes, the total would be $56.90. The two books and the CD would be $61.90. Shipping and handling would, of course, be extra.

Now my publisher is a pretty smart guy. (His mom told me so.) And he's concerned about the rising price of gasoline. He figures pretty soon shipping costs are going to go up. They always do. So he figures it's better to ship books today instead of after the price increase.

He also knows that one of the biggest costs in publishing is warehouse space. Two books and a cassette or CD package take up three times as much space as a single book.

So he came up with a plan that's sure to make everyone happy. It'll cut his warehouse costs and get these books and audio programs in your hands before any price increase. On top of that, he figured out a way to give you a hefty discount – an incentive to get you to order right now.

Here it is ...

Order the two books and the audio relaxation program online, for only $39.77. That's a savings of 31% or 39%, depending on which package you order. It might be a good idea to order two or three and share them with friends. And with the savings you'll be pocketing, that makes a lot of sense.

6 Gifts ... With My Compliments

At the very end of Moments ... Not Years, there is a poem that has so stirred the will to survive and the need to triumph in people, that I have decided to have it imprinted on some gifts for you.

The poem is called "Close the Door When You Leave" and it is a powerful notice to cancer that it is an unwelcome guest ... an invader ... a usurper. It does not belong in my body, nor in yours and there are two places it will never occupy. (Order today to find out what they are.)

I will include 5 bookmarks made of glossy card stock, each imprinted with the poem so many people love. Valued at $5.

I will give you the poem printed on fine parchment paper, worthy of display anywhere in your home or office. I'll take the time to autograph it as well. Valued at $10.

These are all gifts, given to you with my compliments. I hope you will enjoy them.

Good As Gold Guarantee

Voices from the Edge – Life Lessons from the Cancer Community, Moments ... Not Years and Relaxation – Four Guided Journeys to Peace and Serenity are together, a message of triumph and courage. Expect a profound change in your life.

In the unlikely event that you are not satisfied with any of the products you order today, just send them back to us. We'll issue you a full refund on the spot. No hassles. No quibbles. We'll take all the risk. And you keep all of your gifts. Could anything be fairer?

PS: If you're still undecided, let me share a personal story with you. A few years ago I worked with John Stossel, the investigative reporter for ABC News and the television program 20/20. I was working with an organization called Smoke Stoppers at the time.

Later on, my accountant, Rod, saw an episode of 20/20 in which John Stossel talked about breast cancer in men – a rarity to be sure. Rod paid close attention to the show only because he knew of my work with John and my work on health issues, including cancer. The next morning Rod checked himself out and found a lump on his breast. It was cancer.

In later conversation, Rod mentioned that he had had a radical mastectomy. I was shocked. I didn't think this could happen to a guy. The very next morning I checked myself out and noticed a lump in my breast. It was cancer.

What are the chances? A million to one? Think of the chain of events that prompted me to even look for a lump. If I hadn't worked with John, if I hadn't mentioned it to Rod, if the subject on 20/20 that night wasn't men's breast cancer, I may not have caught it in time. And quite frankly, I don't know where I'd be today.

I can directly attribute that series of events to the moment when it all 'clicked' for me and I "got it." This may be the single event that will click for you. I hope you get it. Place your order now.
